

ALL PURPOSE POLITICAL SPEECH

Published May 13, 1927, Princeton Alumni Weekly.

All-purpose political speech suitable for any candidate of any political persuasion at anytime.

“Any Event” by Andrew Parker Nevin, Princeton class of 1895.

=====

(people cheering)

Thank you. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you very much.

It is a great and undeserved privilege to address such an audience as I see before me. At no previous time in the history of civilization have greater problems confronted and challenged the ingenuity of man’s intellect than now. Let us look around us. What do we see on the horizon? Whither are we drifting? Under what mist of clouds does the future stand secure? The crucial test for that solution of all these intricate problems is the sheer and forceful application of those immutable laws, which have always guided the hand of man, groping as it were for some faint beacon light for his hopes and aspirations.

What then is our duty? Shall we continue to drift? No. With all the impetus of my being, I hurl back the message. No, drifting must stop. We must press onwards and upwards toward the ultimate goal to which we all aspire.

But I cannot conclude my remarks, dear friends. That touching briefly upon a subject, which I know is steeped in your very consciousness, and I refer to that spirit, which gleams in the eyes of the newborn babe; that animates the toiling masses; that sways all the hosts of humanity. Without this energizing principle, all commerce, trade and industry will perish as surely as the crimson sunset follows the golden sunshine.

Thank you. Thank you very much. Thank you. Thank you very much. Thank you. Thank you.